

Psychology
Social Graduate Program

College of BSS - Psychology Department - Assessment Report AY 2006-2007

Measurable learning objective	Place in curriculum where objective is assessed	Academic year objective was/will be assessed	Assessment/procedures Methods/Strategies	Summary of findings about student learning	Use of findings for program improvement
Objective J: To train students to become master level psychologists in Social Psychology
To acquire broad familiarity with the empirical and theoretical literature of Social Psychology, and to gain in-depth knowledge of one or more specific domains of research and application.	Successful completion of a seminar in Social Psychology and a seminar in current trends and issues.	2007/2008	The Psychology department Assessment Committee is currently revising it's assessment process for graduate programs to align with the 6th Cycle of Review and the criteria associated with the 6th Cycle of Review. It is the department's desire to have a knowledge assessment for graduate students.	N/A	The Psychology department Assessment Committee is currently revising it's assessment process for graduate programs to align with the 6th Cycle of Review and the criteria associated with the 6th Cycle of Review. It is the department's desire to have a kno
To gain professional-level skills in written and oral communication of concepts and research in Social Psychology.	Successful completion of a seminar in Social Psychology, a seminar in current trends and issues, and a seminar to accompany field problems in Social Psychology.	2007/2008		N/A
To become proficient in research design, and in the independent conduct of research projects.	Successful completion of courses in research methods and techniques, and survey research.	2007/2008		N/A

Psychology
Social Graduate Program

To develop intellectual maturity and career-relevant experience through supervised research and/or applied endeavors in Social Psychology and group dynamics.	Successful completion of supervised work in settings where research and/or applications are carried out by active professionals, with a related program of reading, written work, and oral presentations.	2007/2008		N/A
To appreciate the nature and importance of ethical principles in research and applications in Social Psychology.	Successful completion of a seminar in ethics and professional responsibilities.	2007/2008		N/A	