

Online WAC/WID Resources for Students

- The Campus Academic Resource Center (CARP) here at SF State has created a collection of helpful handouts on Reading, Writing and Study Skills, as well as Mathematics, Science, and Business.
<https://carp.sfsu.edu/content/helpful-handouts>
- In addition to their many detailed and user-friendly writing resources, the OWL website at Purdue University offers a section on WAC that provides an introduction to WAC, WID and Writing to Learn, as well as a reading list and several essays, that are informative for teachers and students alike.
<https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/671/01/>
- The WAC Program at Appalachian State University has a large collection of handouts that offer detailed guidelines for writing in specific disciplines (for example, Biology, Journalism, or Social Work). Each handout lists common types of writing and evidence used in that discipline, as well as other useful information about conventions, citations style, and more!
<https://wac.appstate.edu/composition/rc-2001-resources/writing-about-guidelines-wags>
- The Harvard Writing Project presents a collection of writing guides for many different disciplines; they are downloadable as PDF booklets and provide a very detailed description of how to approach assignments in specific fields. There are also several short handouts that offer brief guides to writing in History, Philosophy, Psychology and English.
<https://writingproject.fas.harvard.edu/pages/writing-guides>
- The WAC Writing Guides at Loyola University, New Orleans include a collection of handouts that describe specific types of writing (for example, business memos, lab reports, and literature reviews) and give helpful tips on approaching assignments.
<http://www.loyno.edu/success/writing-guides>
- For both general writing tips and more information on discipline-specific writing, check out the Colorado State University Writing Studio. This website provides a huge number of tools and resources for students to help with the writing process, research, and writing in several different disciplines.
<https://writing.colostate.edu>